請回答下列第 46 題至第 50 題

Two years ago, a group of elders in a village in north-western Uganda agreed to lend their land to refugees from South Sudan. About 120,000 are now in the surrounding area. Here they live in tarpaulin shelters and mud-brick huts on a patch of scrub where cows once grazed. Kemis Butele, a gravel-voiced Ugandan elder, explains that hosting refugees is a way for a remote place, long neglected by the central government, to get noticed. He hopes for new schools, clinics and a decent road – and “that our children can get jobs.”

There are more than 20 million refugees in the world today, more than at any time since the end of the second world war. Nearly 90% reside in poor countries. In many, to preserve jobs for natives, governments bar refugees from working in the formal economy. Uganda has shown how a different approach can reap dividends. The government gives refugees land plots and lets them work. In some places, the refugees boost local businesses and act as a magnet for foreign aid. Mr. Butele and many other Ugandans see their new neighbors as a benefit, not a burden. Sadly, such attitudes are still the exception.

Refugees are “brothers and sisters,” say many Ugandans. Mr. Butele was once one himself. But the welcome is also a pragmatic one. Northern Uganda is so poor that some locals pose as refugees to receive food aid. Others see refugees as buyers for local goods. Elsewhere in Uganda has indeed seen such positive spillover. One study from 2016 found that the presence of Congolese refugees in western Uganda had increased consumption per household. Another estimates that each new refugee household boosts total income, including that of refugees, by $320-430 more than the cost of the aid the household is given. That rises to $560-670 when refugees are given cash instead of rations.

- (A) 46. What is the main idea of this passage?
- (A) Allowing refugees to work can bring benefits.
 - (B) Barring refugees from working boosts economy.
 - (C) The Ugandan approach to refugees proves problematic.
 - (D) Ugandans host refugees to receive foreign aid.
- (B) 47. Why do many governments bar refugees from working in the formal economy?
- (A) Refugees would rather take odd jobs in a bar than formal jobs.
 - (B) The governments intend to preserve jobs for the local natives.
 - (C) The research shows that immigrants rarely take native workers' jobs.
 - (D) The research shows that refugees have increased consumption per household.
- (D) 48. Which of the following words is closest in meaning to “spillover”?
- (A) Dividend. (B) Magnet. (C) Presence. (D) Excess.
- (C) 49. What is the implication of the statement, “such attitudes are still the exception”?
- (A) The majority of refugees prefer to reside in rich countries.
 - (B) The majority of governments give refugees land plots.
 - (C) The majority of people consider refugees to be a burden.
 - (D) The majority of local businesses see refugees as a benefit.
- (D) 50. Which of the following statements is true?
- (A) Ugandans welcomed refugees because the central government promised new schools, clinics and a decent road.
 - (B) Most refugees stayed in poor countries in order to boost local businesses and act as a magnet for foreign aid.
 - (C) A study found that the presence of refugees in Uganda had decreased consumption per household.
 - (D) Each new refugee household boosted total income more than the cost of the aid the household was given.
